Once in a while a concept comes along that makes you want to weep with admiration (and curse for not thinking of it first). Online retailer CWDigital has got its thinking cap on and come up with the startlingly clever idea of shipping a PVR in time for the World Cup that has the schedule for all the England matches already programmed to record. All games are set to be recorded for four hours 15 minutes, starting 15 minutes before kick off time so it covers all eventualities like late kick off, full time, extra time, penalties, sudden death penalties, etc. All this on a very able 160GB hard drive twin tuner Humax PVR that also has 'Chase Play' functionality which means, unlike other PVRs on the market, if you do make it home in time to watch a match that's already started, you can start watching from the beginning while it continues to record to the end. Clever clogs. AE
